

- This is a picture of Ellis Island, located in New York City. It is a former immigration inspection station that is now a museum and visited by many each day.

- This picture shows immigrants patiently awaiting to cross over into American grounds.
- This was a big moment for many people who have had plans to go to America for many years. This meant a better life for their family and more offers to give themselves a better life.

- This picture shows people waiting with their bags to become citizens in the United States.

- This photo shows the moment immigrants laid eyes on the Statue of Liberty in New York City. To them, this meant freedom, happiness and a better life.
- As it is shown, many in the photo are hugging and holding their loved ones to share the joy with each other.

- This is part of what immigration looks like today. This is a picture of the Migrant Caravan which are migrant caravans that travel from the Guatemala–Mexico border to the Mexico–United States border.